All broached on the subject were of the belief that it would be a great blessing to all mankind, with the exception of one, Dr. Lyman B. blow, as in the good old days! I like my winters cold and bleak, with stormy winds that rave and shrick and swat us forty ways. When I was young, old Winter came in early fall, and played the game till some time in July; he piled his snowdrifts in the lane, and wrote his trade-mark on the pane, and made the feathers fly. He was a burly, noisy wight, who painted things by day and night, and read the riot act; and people gloried in the snow, and children mourned to see him go, when his backbone was cracked. But Winter nowadays is kind and ladylike and quite refined, a thing of bows and smirks; he comes kotowing to your door, and makes a healthy man so sore, he roasts the whole blamed works. If Winter springs a little frost, he thinks his reputation's lost; your pardon he entreats; he tries to fix things with a thaw, and stands around and wags his jaw and chews the rag and bleats. All too effeminate he's grown; he has resigned his frozen throne, his manners loud and rude; he wears a shirt waist made of gauze, and at our doors he wags his jaws, Dame Nature's spindling dude. O send along your ice and snow, and let the doggone blizzards blow, and whoop to beat the band! The winters of the time long gone produced big men of force and brawn, who gave to us this land!
